

Seeds And Oils

Seed Prices Firm
Sesamum Seeds
The Wood Oil Market

The tendency of seed prices in Shanghai continues upward in the main, although there is some irregularity at times. Speculative offerings are lighter, and there is an increase in the movement of seeds from the primary markets to Shanghai and Hankow. Judging from information coming to hand, there will be increasing receipts of sesamum seeds from now. The Chinese farmers are holding a large quantity in the expectation that prices will register a further rise. A bullish construction is placed on the state of the supplies in Europe, but for the time being the chances of doing business are killed by reason of the big difference that exists between the price ruling in Shanghai and that which consumers in Europe are prepared to offer. The last advice place the rate in Europe at $25.16 per ton c.i.f. Europe, and at the local price of $8.20 per picul the quotation works out in sterling to $26.16 per ton.

Apparently, the rate in Hankow is more advantageous for export trade, for it is understood that some 1,000 tons of sesamum seeds have been concluded for shipment to Europe in February at $25.10 per ton. Present holdings of these seeds in Shanghai are estimated at a small figure, while the supplies in Hankow are unknown. Computations place the quantity sold both in Hankow and Shanghai since the opening of the season up to date at about 30,000 tons, while during the whole of last season there had been shipped some 60,000 tons to Europe.

Stocks of these seeds in the interior are estimated at about more than 30,000 tons, and if we deduct the amount that will be exported from Shanghai and Hankow during February and March (calculated at 20,000 tons) the supplies left would not be very much. Of course, so long as India is able to undersell China in the sesamum seeds market it is not to be expected that European buyers will be prompted to improve their buying quotations. There has been, on the whole, a stronger feeling in the market, and a more active demand for various descriptions of fats and the moderate revival of interest displayed in that direction seems like being maintained. Consumers in Europe have been buying rather more freely, which, in addition to the firmer conditions obtained in the markets for raw materials, has induced some new speculative buying, more especially in linseed oil for deliveries running into the next summer months. Linseed crushers have been more anxious to pick up parcels near at hand in London.

WOOD OIL MARKET

There is no great activity in wood oil but a fair inquiry is noted. It has been firm most of the time, though conflicting reports are current as to prices at which it is possible to purchase. The Hankow market is quiet but apparently firm. There is a fair inquiry in some quarters from the varnish trade in the United States, but actual transactions in Hankow are seemingly not of much importance. The new crop of Hankow wood oil is beginning to move, and there is likelihood of a material increase in offerings.

The high cost of cottonseed oil in the United States is likely, in the opinion of some, to bring the American consumers into the Shanghai market for sesamum seeds. A small movement is already noticed in this direction. There are small lots of wood oil available in San Francisco at present at 21 cent cents but stocks in America are moving very slowly and consumption at present is limited. The future trend, however, is difficult to judge and consumers and dealers alike are acting with caution. A certain amount of South China wood oil is finding its way to the Pacific Coast market, and the quality of oil handled by American importers.

Text Of $100,000 Prize Plan For World Peace Is Announced

WORLD COURT AND LEAGUE COOPERATION ARE ADVISED

U. S. Would Retain Its Independence Of Old World

DROP ARTICLE X

Treaty Provisions To Be Authorized By Congress

(BY UNITED PRESS)

New York, Jan. 7.—Announcement was made here today of the peace plan which was adjudged best of all the thousands submitted in the $100,000 prize contest conducted by Edward Bok.

The plan provides for America's entrance into the International World Court of Justice and for an extension of its co-operation with the League Assembly and Council, without membership in the League. The United States would not assume any obligations regarding political questions or matters of internal administration in any foreign state.

The plan would safeguard the Monroe doctrine and maintain the tradition of America's absolute independence of the Old World. The program urges also that Articles Ten and Sixteen of the Covenant of the League of Nations be dropped or amended in such a manner as to eliminate the features of coercion. America would accept none of the obligations under the Versailles treaty unless they are authorized by Congress. The United States should urge the admission to the League of Nations of any self-governing nation by a two-thirds vote of members of the League.

The plan also urges collaboration looking toward revision and development of international law, employing the services of a commission of jurists whose reports would be subject to review by the Assembly of the League of Nations, which, in turn, would recommend such legislation to all of the nations holding membership in the League. The jury declared that mutual co-operation is the only pathway to peace. The jury expressed the hope that the first fruits of the plan would be the adoption of universal legislation prohibiting the manufacture of war materials, which would be possible under the plan.

(Reuter's American Service)
New York, Jan. 7.—The prize of $100,000 offered by Mr. Edward Bok for the best practical plan whereby the United States could co-operate with other nations with a view to the prevention of war has been awarded to the author of a scheme based on the American Government extending its present co-operation with the League of Nations and participating in the work of the latter's Assembly and Council under certain conditions and regulations. Altogether there were 22,165 plans submitted.

The name of the winner will not be disclosed until Americans have been given an opportunity to judge the merits of the plan by a most extensive public referendum in February. Senator Elihu Root, the chairman of the jury, in the award says that there is no one approach to world peace. It is necessary to recognize, in the opinion of the jury, not merely the political but also the psychological and economic factors. The winning plan offers the most effective suggestions whereby the United States may co-operate with other nations.

WAR SCENES RE-STAGED AS SEINE HITS HIGH LEVEL

Suburbs Are Almost Like Town On Battle Line

MANY FATALITIES

Trains For Paris Are Crowded With Refugees

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, Jan. 6.—A maximum rise of 24 feet was registered at Pont d'Austerlitz last night. The Seine is now stationary. Experts anticipate an early subsidence.

The situation in the suburbs remains grave. The railway station at Maisons Alfort resembles a town on the battle-front. Trains left for Paris crowded with refugees.

Practically the whole of Chatillon is under water.

The railways have been cut in several districts. The swiftness and depth of the torrents have been responsible for a number of fatalities.

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, Jan. 5.—It is hoped that the flood has now reached its worst since the highest level has already been passed on the upper reaches of the Seine. Nevertheless the situation is still threatening as infiltration of water has started in many parts of the capital, remote from the river.

The sensation of the day was the collapse of the wall separating the Invalides railway from the Seine. The water in the Invalides station is 19 feet deep, preventing resumption of traffic for at least several weeks.

Inhabitants of the suburbs continue to leave their homes but the waters rose rapidly during the night at Vitry marooning a populous area which is now inaccessible. Women and children are visible on the roofs signalling with handkerchiefs and clothing. Numerous works have been closed, idling many thousands of people.

Premier Sees Approval Of Reparations Policy In Results

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, Jan. 6.—The elections of one-third of the Senate are proceeding. The results up to the present reveal little change. M. Poincare was re-elected for the Meuse by an enormous majority. Speaking after his reelection, the Premier said: "We shall determinedly pursue the reparations policy you have approved until we secure a peaceful triumph and complete execution of the Treaty."

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, Jan. 6.—The following are the results of the first ballot in the Senatorial elections: Liberal Conservatives 17; Republicans 13; one new; Independent Radicals 2, one new; Radical Socialists 29, one new; Republican Socialists 2, one new; Unified Socialists 1 new. There were 82 final results. There are 33 ballots. The results from Martinique have not yet arrived. The Republicans gain 1 and lose 2; the Left Republicans gain 1 and lose 1; the Independent Radicals gain 1 and lose 1; the Radical Socialists gain two and lose two; the Republican Socialists gain one and lose one.

FOUR ARE GUILTY IN HALF-MILLION BOND THEFT CASE

Quartette Will Be Sentenced Next Wednesday By Mixed Court

The half-million dollar Government bond theft case was concluded before Assessor Martin and Magistrate Kwan at the Mixed Court yesterday, when four of the five men charged with the robbery were found guilty, while the fifth, together with a woman held as an accessory to the fact, was dismissed.

In concluding the case for the police Mr. Easley Matland asked that the accused be turned over to the Arsenal authorities for execution. It was a very serious case, he said, a deliberate highway robbery. Though the two rhesa coolies employed by the victimized Tung Yih Trust Company had given the show away, admitting the planning of the robbery, the others had come along and participated in it, and there was no difference in the guilt of them all.

After announcing that the Court found the four men guilty, the Assessor stated that they could be brought up next Wednesday morning for sentence. The Court declined to grant an order of expulsion for the discharged accused, represented by Mr. L. K. Kentwell, stating that there were no previous convictions standing against them.

The robbery, it will be recalled, occurred on Ningpo Road on November 29, an 18-year-old coolie who was transporting the bonds from the Stock Exchange to the Trust Company office being set upon by a gang of about ten men. Remarkably efficient work by the police, under direction of Sub-Inspector York and Hunter of Central station, resulted in a number of arrests and the recovery of 379 of the $1,000 bonds within 24 hours.

The man was arrested and is now held in the Chinese jail near the Commercial Press plant.

FRANCONIA TOURISTS IN SHANGHAI ON WORLD TRIP

IBANEZ COMING

Spanish Author To Arrive Tomorrow From Peking

The largest aggregation of tourists ever to come to Shanghai on one ship arrived at Woosung yesterday afternoon on the trans-Canada liner Franconia, and a few minutes later were on their way up the river to begin a two-day sightseeing expedition in city and environs.

While most of the travelers came on the Franconia two large parties made the trip overland, visiting Peking and Korea en route. One party, under the direction of Mr. R. E. Cavin, and composed of 43 of the globe-trotters, arrived from Peking last night, and another party of 65, including Don Vicente Ibanez, Ibanez, a famous Spanish author, and Governor Thomas E. Kirby, arrived from Peking today.

The tourists taking the American Express Company tour were their own guides yesterday afternoon and last night, and spent their time rambling around, drinking in their first taste of Chinese life, shopping, tea-dancing in the new Astor Hotel ballroom, and seeing Shanghai's famed sights.

Today the entire party will go on rickshas and automobile excursions to the Lung Wa pa old and visit many other points of interest to casual visitors in the city and environs. Tonight, the only special function arranged for the forty or more foreigners on board the Franconia will be the supper of the Noodle and Shrimp Club at dinner.

The manager of the Hat is a representative American, gathering collected from almost every section of the United States, although many foreign countries are represented on the list, rather than an assemblage of aged and infirm. Most of them are regular, everyday folks who are out to see the world, delve into strange places, marvel at the wonders they uncover and try to go back home.

Among the more prominent passengers are Don Ibanez, author of "The Four Horsemen" and several other extremely well-known novels, who is now in Peking, Ibanez was the guest of the Spanish Minister at a dinner in his home at the capital and has been widely entertained at all parts of the ship has made. He will be at the Palace Hotel here until the vessel sails.

WIFE DREAMS OF DEATH OF CAPT. BRANDT

A strange, almost supernatural manifestation of prevision through dreams was given in Shanghai yesterday when Mrs. Brandt, 304 Avenue Joffre, was informed of the death of her husband, Captain F. J. Brandt, killed by robbers on board the low-level Gorges steamer, owned by Chinese and Captain Brandt, and for which the Dollar Company are booking agents, while it was anchored for the night at Fungtsien, a small river port between Ichang and Chungking, about 50 miles above Wanshan, a district which is notorious for the outrages that have been committed on foreign vessels. Last year a Japanese ship was attacked and the captain killed in almost the same spot.

The Tsauai was taken into port by the pilot, according to the message, and full details of the outrage are expected to be wired to Shanghai tomorrow, when they make their report.

Defeated Soldiers Of First Division Are Blamed

(Exclusive China Press)

Hankow, Jan. 7.—Capt. F. J. Brandt, a British subject, master of the s.s. Tsauai, which is owned by the Hanyang Company and for which the Robert Dollar Company are booking agents, was killed and thrown overboard by Yangtze pirates who boarded his steamer on the night of January 4 while it was at anchor at Kasehien, below Fengtu and above Wanshan.

Sampans are dragging the river for Capt. Brandt's body. The Chinese comrades of the ship and two of the members of his staff were also killed.

An official report of the raid has been received here.

Savage robber-soldiers wrote another bloody page in Yangtze up-river shipping outrages on Saturday night when they shot and killed Captain F. J. Brandt, British master of the s.s. Tsauai, and the Chinese shroff on the vessel, and threw their bodies in the river, and wounded several Chinese passengers on the Gorges steamer after looting the ship at Fungtsien according to a message received late yesterday by the Robert Dollar Company from its Ichang office.

Soldiers, driven out of Chungking in the internecine warfare that has raged about that port for sometime, turned outlaws, are believed to be the murderers. The brutal murders occurred on board the low-level Gorges steamer, owned by Chinese and Captain Brandt, and for which the Dollar Company are booking agents, while it was anchored for the night at Fungtsien, a small river port between Ichang and Chungking, about 50 miles above Wanshan, a district which is notorious for the outrages that have been committed on foreign vessels. Last year a Japanese ship was attacked and the captain killed in almost the same spot.

The Tsauai was taken into port by the pilot, according to the message, and full details of the outrage are expected to be wired to Shanghai tomorrow, when they make their report.

(Reuter's Service)

Captain Brandt's wife and family—twins aged 7, a boy aged 9 and a stepson, Mr. F. E. Smith of the Asiatic Motors—live at 504 Avenue Joffre. Captain Brandt was 45 years old. He was born at Hongkong and had spent practically his entire life navigating China's coasts and rivers. He had been master of Gorges vessels for the last 14 years and had already announced that this would be his last season up-river as he intended retiring and living in Shanghai.

He was very well known here, especially among shipping men, and was known as one of the most experienced of all foreign masters of ships on the upper river.

His ship, in which he owned one-fifth interest, was one of two controlled by Chinese for which the Robert Dollar Company acts as booking agents. None of the regular Dollar ships are in that district at the present time.

BANDITS CARRY WOMAN CAPTIVE ON INTO HONAN

Wuchang Tuchun Gets Orders To Fight Brigands From Wu

(Independent News Service)

Hankow, Jan. 7.—Bandits under the notorious bandit chief, Lao Yang-jen, who captured Mrs. Julline Kilen of the Lutheran Brethren Mission during a raid at Tsao-yang last week, are carrying their captive toward Mitang, Honan, according to word received here tonight.

The bandits, following in the footsteps of Sun Mei-yao's horde after their capture of the foreigners on board the "Blue Express" in May, last year, are demanding enrollment in the National Army and a large supply of ammunition and money before Mrs. Kilen will be released.

Tuchun Hsiao Yao-nan of Wuchang, who has just returned from a conference with General Wu Pei-fu at Loyang, has orders to take the field and fight the bandits, it is reported.

Big Crowd Out For Farewell To The Ballet

The largest crowd of the year turned out at the Del Monte Cafe last night for the farewell performance of the Russian ballet after a solid year's run at the popular dancing place. Three very good ballet members, including the two heavy favorites, the Gypsy and Snowflake ballets, were presented. Hamilton and Mills gave some of their favorites and some new songs in their usual snappy and engaging manner, and everybody had a rollicking good time until 3 o'clock in the morning.

It was a benefit performance for the ballet and a goodly sum from admittances will be turned over to the Ballet Master, to Mr. Hamilton, the producer, and to the ballet girls by Manager Thurman Hyde, as a result.

Although the ballet has finished at the Del Monte A-1 entertainment will still be provided. Tonight, as a special attraction, the Del Monte will introduce the two Human Frogs, the Dura's contortionists extraordinary.

Widespread Distribution Of Poppy Seed Reported

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Jan. 3.—The International Anti-Opium Association issues the following:

Several of the trans-Pacific liners of the Toko Kisen Kaisha have been subjected to heavy fines at San Francisco lately because of opium being found concealed on board. The traffic is said to have been especially brisk since the earthquake, and the Kobe Shimbun reports that one of the liners has been subjected to a fine of $152,650. The total of the fines inflicted on his company since July last year is $235,400 (gold) according to the same paper.

During 1923 the China Pacific Mail (a Chinese Company) went into liquidation, largely as the result of opium fines imposed in San Francisco which amounted to over $250,000 gold.

Some Japanese papers hint that the U. S. A. is endeavoring to drive Japanese vessels off the route, and suggest that other vessels are operating freely in opium, but that only the Japanese are seized. This is entirely untrue as seen by the instance of the China Mail.

Engineering Society Has Meeting Today

The Engineering Society of China will meet today at the Old Carlton Cafe, Ningpo Road, at 5:30 p.m., when Mr. J. Oswald will read a paper entitled "Brief Outline of the Military Railways of the Egyptian Expeditionary Force (1916-1919)."

Figures Of Speech

"Piling Ossa upon Pelion" means making desperate but fruitless efforts. The expression goes back to very ancient Greek mythology, and refers to the war waged by the Titans against Jupiter and the other gods on Olympus.

Ossa was a steep, conical peak in Thessaly; Pelion was a high wooded mountain nearby. According to the classic myth, in the attempt to scale Mount Olympus, the home of the gods, the Titans placed Pelion upon Ossa. Three times they made the attempt, and were beaten back each time by the lightning of Jupiter. "With the gleam of the lightning the Titans were blinded, by the earthquake they were laid low, with the flames they were writer.

Laurel Gray's Love Gossip

Girls—you must invent new stuff. Men are becoming wary, chary, aloof, weary of the old, old arts and crafts of the fair sex. Jazz is passe. Flapper fashions are falling into decay. If not actual disrepute, a man now saunters at lipstick tracks, where a year ago they started. No man drops over backward with a smile on his lips at the baby vamp or the willowy insinuator or the girl with wondrous eyes. Nope, no more.

I don't know whether men are getting wiser as the new generation is growing up, or whether they are beginning to develop that instinctive punch the ladies have claimed as their very own since Eve had that little interlude in the garden with the serpent—I mean intuition. But whatever it is, men selections, as he shows a new sense of discrimination and fastidiousness, he becomes awfully stupid and not at all good company.

That is why I insist that women must take a new stand. We masculine party begins to show must turn over a new leaf and present fresh aspects of our many-sided characters to lure the bad, bad men to the altar via the family parlor and the dear old front porch. What shall it be? I have it. A real inspiration. Why not go back, say, thirty years, and present the same commonplace virtues with which our mothers won our daddies? You know what I mean. Gingham frocks, apple turnovers, "The Maiden's Prayer" on the piano and all that program.

Monster Plane To Fly No More

Dayton, Ohio, Nov. 26.—The Barling bomber, the world's largest airplane, has been condemned by the air service and all further flights have been called off, according to orders issued at McCook Field here today.

All three sets of wings on the huge craft are said to be unsafe for flying. Tail surfaces were also condemned by engineers. In one reliable quarter it was stated $50,000 would be needed to make the plane fit for use.

The Barling bomber, acclaimed by air officials as the most powerful in the world, was built to carry 12,000 pounds of bombs, has never completed its performance tests.

Japan Is Widely Stirred By New Radical Outrage

(Exclusive China Press)

Tokio, Jan. 7.—The greatest consternation is being manifested over the recent radical outbreak in Japan, which so far include the attempt to assassinate the Prince Regent and the attempt made yesterday to blow a bomb at the gates of the Imperial Palace.

Police are taking unusual steps in order to avert future trouble.

According to an official statement, the man who attempted to hurl the bomb at the Palace yesterday is a Korean.

It is not believed that the attempted bombing will delay the wedding of the Prince Regent, which is set for the latter part of this month, although it may result in even less public display than already contemplated.

The Yamamoto cabinet is now holding its final emergency meetings to discuss the attempted bombing of the capital. Viscount Kiyoura has completed his new cabinet and it will assume office within a few days.

Seeds And Oils

It is stated to be of a very high grade, being of good color and bearing the Worstall test satisfactorily. On the other hand, attempts have also been made to import this oil into the United States by inexperienced importers which have resulted in some adulterated oil being received there.

DEMAND FOR PEANUTS

There is a steady demand for peanuts, and a good business is reported from Tsingtau in this product at around yen 8.50 per picul, which is equivalent to $22.10 per ton c.i.f. Europe. The European buyers are offering this rate, so that it would seem the chances of doing a greater trade in this line are roseate. Nothing has been possible from this side owing to the fact that Shanghai prices for peanuts are higher than the level of the Tsingtau market. The local quotation of Ts. 6.80 per picul works out in sterling to £23.10, a difference of pound sterling per ton.

Last week Tsingtau was successful in selling to European consumers about 2,000 tons, and shipments from that center are expected to increase in coming weeks. The bar to a large turnover at present is the lack of tonnage space. The Conference line rate is 36 shillings per ton. Until the regular liners are in, it would appear that a portion of the demand would have to go unsatisfied.

Present stocks in Tsingtau of peanuts are calculated at about 3,000 tons and those in Shanghai at about 2,000 tons. Since the beginning of the season there have been sold for export from Tsingtau principally about 10,000 tons. The United States has been showing no interest owing to the excellent nature of the peanut crop in that country. The Shantung peanut crop for 1923, in common with that of other states, was considerably above average. The crop is mentioned as being 8-10, and this is considerably above average, for an average crop would be some 5-10. In 1923 Tsingtau exported 1,354,211 piculs of peanuts in shells and 1,335,400 piculs of kernels.

GROUNDNUT OIL

In groundnut oil small business has been done in Shanghai at Ts. 6.80 per picul. The Canton merchants have been buying groundnut oil from Tsingtau. Shipments are being made from Tsingtau to Seattle on the basis of Ts. 8.70 per 100 lbs. c.i.f. Seattle. Canadian mills have also bought of this commodity from Tsingtau direct. The takings by Canada since the beginning of the season amount to 5,000 lbs. There has been a good inquiry from Canada this season. Although the Canadian mills also bought large quantities last season.

The market in beans has been very quiet, indeed. Nothing is reported to have been done in Chinese beans, buyers for which are offering Ts. 3.80 per picul ex-godown. London is not buying at this rate, and is offering only £12.6, which works out to Ts. 3.20 per picul. Stocks of Chinese beans in Shanghai are estimated at about 2,000 tons, and these show signs of increasing.

In soy beans the market is quiet at Ts. 4 per picul. The rate in Dairen is yen 5.70, the equivalent of Ts. 4.10. There have been no importations into Shanghai of late. Europe is still buying large quantities from Dairen, but the Japanese have withdrawn from the market. European consumers are buying soy bean oil at 37s. per 100 lbs. A small trade is being done with Dairen direct.

The market in rapeseeds is stagnant. India still continues to sell to Europe. There is no stock in Shanghai. The Japanese are buying in India but the quantity is not as large as before. Purchases on account of Japan have been limited to some 500 to 600 tons per week.

A party of American missionaries recently arrived at Yunnanfu with the intention of going to Batang but was stopped by the Consul. Batang has for years been at the mercy of Tibetan outlaws operating in Chinese controlled territory, who are in no way connected with Tibetans of Tibet proper.

Linnett Knocked Out By Knute Hansen In Four Rounds—Is Outclassed

Local Heavyweight Toys With Soldier Battler From Tientsin; Toledo Loses To Kyko On Foul In Fifth Round; Tigora And Ching Win

By Westa

Knute Hansen, the human Woolworth building, entertained Silent Linnett, of Tientsin, at Louis Ladow's Foyer de Flop last evening and proved himself an excellent host. Knute had been told that the Tientsin man was unusually sensitive to anything in the way of raucous auditory disturbances, so he provided a flock of knuckle wrens, than which nothing exudes a gentler or more soothing note, to supply the music for the party. Whether the Tientsin man enjoyed the orchestra was not stated but nobody can accuse Knute of failure to furnish plenty of warblers.

The soft voiced melody makers which Hansen provided for the proceedings began to clear their throats early in the evening, and about half way through the fourth stanza they cut loose with a chorus that was on the point of lulling the guest of honor to sleep—a contingency that Toastmaster O'Hara forestalled by calling on Knute to put his feathered orchestra back in the cage.

FIGHT DISAPPOINTING
It was not much of a box party. Linnett's weight was announced as 176 pounds, and Knute's as 210. The Tientsin man appeared heavier than that, but Knute, when they stood together in the middle of the ring to have their pictures taken, towered over his opponent like a birthday cake to a wafer.

The local battler was so big, as a matter of fact, that even Doc O'Hara had to look up at him when he was issuing the customary warning to break clean in the clinches, and when the Sawbones had to look up to them to announce to the knock kneed world that they are Brobdingnagian indeed.

One look at the two battlers was enough to convince most of those present that it would be much of a scrap, and sure enough, it wasn't. Linnett made a foot race out of it as long as he could and if the arena had been a polo field he might have sprinted the distance. But since the so called argument was staged in a squared circle the soldier, agile as he was, couldn't keep Knute from herding him into the corners occasionally, and when this happened the local heavy slammed him in the ribs so terrifically that he shook all the way down to the ground.

MATTY AT HELM
Matty Smith, Knute's manager and mentor, being a wise and crafty person, ordered his charge to play safe in the early rounds, in consequence of which Knute didn't do much in those sessions except to stalk the soldier around and around the ring. At the beginning of the fourth, however, Matty told Knute to go out and get him, and this the mountainous Dane proceeded to do. He waded into the soldier with right and left swings that shook Louie's slamming salon clear down to its foundations. Linnett tried to protect himself as best he could, but he was so groggy that that he couldn't keep his arms up. He finally went down in a heap, and although he attempted to get back on his feet the futility of allowing the uneven scrap to continue was apparent to all, consequently the Doc stopped it.

Linnett proved himself a game battler. For the special benefit of his friends and fellow soldiers up in Tientsin let it be said that he kept on going even after Hansen had slammed some punches into his ribs and against the side of his head that must have nearly killed him, and which certainly would have given him a good excuse to flop for the count if he had been of a mind to do so. Far from flopping for the count, however, the soldier kept on going as long as he could, and was as sore as a boiled owl when the referee wisely decided to save him from complete slaughter.

soated; but the redoubtable Jack will be toppled one of these days and there are men who know the fight game in this town who will tell you, after watching the enormous Knute in action last night, that he has just as good a chance as anybody at present in sight to do the toppling. He certainly has all the physical requirements necessary for that job. He weighs well over two hundred pounds and is built absolutely in proportion, with not an ounce of superfluous flesh on his tremendous frame. Moreover, he is young, ambitious and clean living. In Matty Smith he has a manager and trainer who knows the fight game from beginning to end, and who is teaching him how to use his tremendous physical equipment to best advantage. Knute may not get to the top, or anywhere near the top; but there are many here, the present writer included, who will not be in the least surprised if he does.

In last night's scrap he appeared a bit awkward at times, but against this it must be remembered that when two men are in a ring and one of them is fighting a purely defensive fight it is difficult for the other to show to good advantage. Witness the Gibbons-Dempsey battle in Shelby, Montana; a scrap in which Gibbons, a second rater, was able to make Dempsey look rather foolish for the sole reason that his opponent was in there with but one purpose in mind, namely, to stay as long as he could. It's hard to knock them when they stick their gloves under their chin and their elbows in their ribs.

TOLEDO LOSES
As to the rest of the card last night, main interest centered in the return bout between Battling Kyko and Toledo for the water weight championship of Shanghai. This was a furious, slam bang affair in which Toledo was having slightly the better of it when, in a particularly lively mixup, he hit Kyko after the latter had slipped to the floor. Doc O'Hara, who refereed the battle, immediately disqualified Toledo and gave the fight to Kyko.

There was much dissatisfaction with this decision, particularly in view of the fact, which was apparent to all, that Toledo's blow was neither damaging nor intentional. The genial Doc, while technically within his rights, might have been content with stopping the scrap long

YATES WINNER OF INTER-BAPTIST SOCCER SERIES

Wayland Academy And Shanghai College Middle Defeated

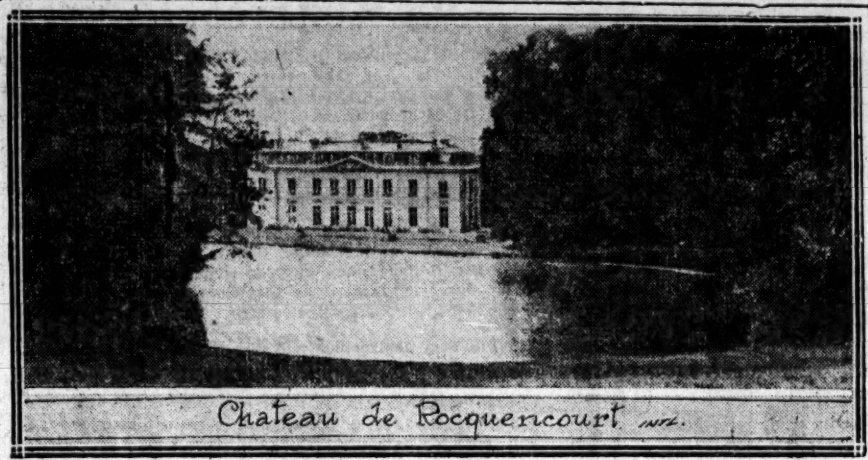

Last Friday and Saturday an Inter-Baptist Football Championship Series was played off by Yates Academy, Wayland Academy and Shanghai College Middle School. Ningpo Middle School, the Shanghai Baptist Academy, Huchow Baptist Academy and Mission Academy were also to participate but found it impossible to do so. Ningpo Middle School had planned to put in a team but just before the opening of the game found that they could not come so Shanghai Middle School put in two teams an "A" Team and a "B" Team.

On Friday at 3.30 p.m. Yates played Shanghai Middle School "A" Team and Wayland Academy played Shanghai Middle "B" Team. In the former, refereed by C. F. Soong, Yates won 1-0. This lonely goal was made on a penalty kick. In the other match, refereed by T. C. Peng, Wayland Academy won over the Shanghai "B" Team 3-0.

To Develop The Art Of--Walking

BY GARRETT P. SERVIS

Walking is both a habit and an art. Many acquire the habit without developing the art. When you walk only for some definite purpose, as for instance in obedience to your doctor who tells you you must to brace up your health, there is no art about it. But it depends upon you to develop the art.

I am not going to define this art, or lay down its rules, for I am only an amateur in the practice of it, but I want to call attention to a little book that I have just bought which, it seems to me, teaches the art of walking without professing to do so. It is the "New York Walk Book," of Messrs. Torrey, Place and Dickinson, recently put forth by the American Geographical Society.

With its maps, pictures, descriptions and historic gentle and vivid impression of the wonderful country that surrounds the American metropolis within a radius varying from fifty to a hundred miles. Antiquists get sweeping views and passing glimpses of the beauties and curiosities of this region, but its intimacies are mostly reserved for those who go a foot.

The great fault, or failure, of most guide-books is the absence of information about geology and natural history. They let you go through a country filled with the most interesting chapters of the earth's history, or abounding in some of its most remarkable and precious mineral and vegetable possessions, without a word to point out these things. For at such books tell you, you might as well be wandering over a globe made of wood, or formed by pouring concrete into a mould, instead of one which has been shaped in the crucible of a sun from all the primal elements that make up the universe, and which retains the marks of its creation for all to recognize who will.

field, it does not seem topographically far removed from the gnarled and granite Highlands eastward; but geologically it is much younger, being composed of sandstones, shales and conglomerates of Devonian and Silurian times. It is part of a long ridge of these strata extending 40 miles southward into New Jersey past Greenwood Lake and Green Pond, and ending at a point south of the line of the Lackawanna Railroad at Mount Arlington, south of Lake Hopatcong. It was formed as sediments in a narrow fiord of the ancient sea which, at the beginning of the Silurian time, surrounded the "Old Land," in which were included much that is now New England, eastern New York, and northern New Jersey, together with land now covered by the Atlantic.

The conglomerate ledges, composed of the highest and youngest of the Shumunk strata, are conspicuous on the long level summit, with a reddish purple matrix inclosing white quartz pebbles up to six inches in diameter—the remnants of the erosion of streams and the crashing of the surf on hills and shores of the "Old Land," deposited in the bottom and shore flots of the ancient fiord.

I have italicized the closed sentence to call attention to the kind of topographical description that every guide-book ought to contain if it is to be anything more than a tender to tourist inns, roadside restaurants, and dance-cabarets. Since our world has had such a marvelous history, the marks and natural monuments of which are everywhere around us and under our feet, why should its inhabitants, so boastful as they are of their intelligence, wander over its time-sculptured face, attentive to nothing, and aware of nothing, but there own cheapest performances? With geological hints and descriptions go naturally succinct notes on the human history of the land—a land on which a preceding and totally different race has left the most interesting tokens of its presence. A long walk from which are brought back such recollections as these becomes an event, whose educative effects are incalculable. It strengthens and develops both body and mind.

The territory around New York is not the only paradise for walking that needs the proper kind of guide to make its riches known.

There are others equally fine, some possibly even finer, surrounding the great centers of population, east, west, and south. Some of them already have good guide-books, and others are sure to get them, now that the public is beginning to understand what is lacking, and the value of it.

Mussolini's First Year

BY GIUSEPPE PREZZOLINI
(The New Republic)

To understand the significance of Italian Fascism, along with the reasons for its success, one must study this great fact of Italian history with the criteria of Italian history, and not with Anglo-Saxon or American formulae which are less likely to give illuminating. A people does not live, does not, in other words, make a history for itself over a period of ten centuries, without bearing the characteristic impression of that history in all its acts.

It is not to be denied that Italians have found the past year a time of greater tranquillity, of less social unrest than they had known for some time. Labor conflict and economic warfare of all kinds have diminished in intensity. Strikes have been avoided. Public service has been functioning as it has never functioned since 1914. It may be, as some people assert, that these improvements would have taken place even without Fascism; it may well be that independent of Fascism pressure the Italian people was already headed toward the restoration of public order and away from the Bolsheviks which had caught its fancy in the years 1919 and 1920. This much is certain, however: nearly everybody believes that the cause of these changes was Fascism; and, in politics, appearances have all the force of realities. On any Italian train one can hear passengers saying that, thanks to Mussolini, they are sure of reaching their destinations and are not likely to be dumped out half way. In the country, farmers will tell you how grateful they are that free contracting has been restored and that their calculations are in no danger of being upset by absurd price fixing imposed by howling mobs or by local governments playing to the grandstand. In the cities, manufacturers and business men are happy because they have lowered wage scales to a workable level, without being pestered with strikes; if the Fascists have given them trouble in other respects, they feel, on the whole, that the country is more normal and better managed, that business has a sounder underpinning, than was the case during the years 1919-1922.

These blessings, it is said, have been paid for with loss of liberty. This is true; but it is important for Americans to remember how the word liberty is understood in Italy. Here is a sign: "Keep off the grass; don't pick the flowers." To an American this means that he should keep off the grass and refrain from picking the flowers. If the sign seems obnoxious to him, he will seek legal means for having it removed. To the Italian, "liberty" means his right to walk on the grass, pick the flowers, tear the bushes up, and throw the sign away. An American asserts his liberty by changing the law; an Italian asserts his liberty by breaking the law and annulling the concept of law itself.

Many of the people who are now protesting against Fascism in the name of liberty are the very ones who for years had been interfering with the citizen's freedom to buy, to sell, to do business, to belong to one party rather than to another. To be sure these old restrictions on liberty were imposed by methods less violent than those of the Fascists. But the Socialist boycott was not a humane weapon; if it did not break heads, it broke hearts.

There is no doubt that radical newspapers are being suppressed by simple decree of the Prefects, and that this procedure is illegal. At any rate, it is as arbitrary as suppressions often made in the United States by the Postmaster General. The right of public assembly has been abrogated but this was done long before the time of the Fascists. Mussolini trenchantly observed in a speech to the Chamber one day, "I got many letters, and petitions from people in Italy: they ask for bridges, roads, subsidies—but never for liberty." There is plenty of discontent with Fascism, but those who complain are complaining, for the most part, of regulations interfering with advantages they formerly enjoyed—measures reducing the number of office-holders, curtailing expenses, abolishing favors and inequalities.

The liberal tradition of Italy is not the liberal tradition of Anglo-Saxon countries. The Italian's sense of liberty is much stronger in matters touching personal and private interests than in matters of public or civic interest. He is more particular about his habits and customs than about a free press, freedom of assembly, the right to vote. It is an easy matter to suppress newspapers. It would be a serious matter to suppress wine shops.

Parliamentary institutions are not native to Italy. We borrowed them from England and France. Their significance and value were vitiated for us the moment suffrage was extended from a few thousands of educated voters to the millions of the ignorant or illiterate masses. The Italian populace had never demanded nor created liberal institutions. Its characteristic achievements in politics have been: first the "comune"—government by a class or party; and second the "signoria," government by a leading citizen, usually made hereditary in his family. All the present generation of Italians, furthermore—the men who have come forward since 1900—were brought up in an anti-parliamentarian atmosphere. The most splendid names in recent Italian thought belong to pitiless critics of democracy: Croce, Gentile, Sorel (much more widely read in Italy than in French), Papini—all anti-democrats. The parliamentary system had been wholly discredited with the Italian public before the advent of Fascism. The deputy has always been regarded by Italians not as a defender of liberty but as an agent of graft and favoritism. The incompetence of Parliament was so evident to every one after the war that it lost the little respect it ever had. However, Fascist tendencies have not been, on the whole, toward a weakening of Parliamentary institutions. By his attitude on the question of electoral reform, Mussolini made it clear that he desires a really representative Parliament for the next elections; that is why he has not dissolved the present Chamber, but has been waiting for the passions of the revolution to die down. Meantime this same Chamber, morally, and almost literally, walked on during and after the "march on Rome," has regained a certain prestige and has done a certain amount of useful work during the past year.

Fascism is not a party; it is a social movement. It is the reaction of the middle classes—an economic, sentimental and moral reaction—against the oppression they were suffering (after supplying the main strength of the war armies) from the peasant and laboring classes

Fascism did not have a fixed, definite platform: it expressed instincts and tendencies for the most part negative. On coming into power, accordingly, it borrowed its program from other parties, and it has applied that program according to the temperaments of its leaders. Reforms have been demanded by Italian experts and competent Italian administrators for the past thirty years. But the old Parliamentary regime could never be brought to making them. During its first twelve months in power, Fascism has set about introducing a reorganization that every one, especially the Liberal, has been calling for.

The reforms so far attempted relate to the budget (reduction of state expenses); to the courts (simplification of procedure, abolition of useless tribunals); and to education (general reorganization). The government is at present struggling with the problems of state administration.

of railroads and of posts, telephones and telegraphs.)

In the matter of the budget, a commission of three (two experts, Liberals and Free-traders, Maffeo Pantaleoni and Umberto Ricci, and a state accountant M. de Bellis), has revised all expenditures of the government. Disbursements have been reduced by about two billion lire, and a balance of income and outlay is in sight. To the disadvantage of powerful interests some important protectionist measures have been repealed, others abolished. The policy of M. De Stefani has, on the whole, inclined toward free trade. As for the courts, all the needless judgeships and offices of justice which had been maintained for purposes of patronage have been abolished. (Continued on Page 8)

OLD JEALOUSIES AROUSSED AGAIN IN AFGHANISTAN

Russia Has Turned More Than Ever To The East,
Is View

(Reuter's Service)
London, Jan. 6.—Discussing Afghanistan, a special correspondent of the Observer says that old frontier jealousies are once more blazing up. It is a mistake to think that the revolution has substantially changed the Russian preoccupation over Central Asia and in the absence of definite understanding between Britain and Russia on Asiatic affairs, competition must necessarily arise.

Russia has turned more than ever to the East and has made enormous sacrifices to maintain her footing on the Eastern markets, notably Persia and Turkistan. The maintenance of Afghanistan as a buffer State is every whit as important to Russia as it is to India. The condition of affairs makes it urgent that relations between Britain and Russia should be placed on a proper diplomatic basis as early as possible.

The one thing which will instantly silence the dissensions of the ruling party in Russia and rally to the Government the non-Bolshevik elements would be any British challenge of the status quo in Central Asia. A rash move in the North-West frontier may affect that more rapidly than it is supposed because the acuteness of suspicion of the other side is not realised.

Silver Combine Is Planned In America

(Reuter's American Service)
Washington, Jan. 5.—Silver interests in the United States are considering the formation of a combine to secure greater American control of the price of silver.

The latest proposal is to incorporate in Canada, though no decision has been reached. Not all concerned are convinced of the effectiveness of the action contemplated. It is pointed out that how to exert influence on the foreign silver market without inviting depression in the home price is a problem not yet solved.

romage by Parliament, have been abolished. The changes in education amount to a virtual revolution, and are so important that they would merit detailed discussion. State examinations have been introduced in all grades. Requirements of Latin and Greek have been extended and Latin made obligatory for entrance to a university. The state will henceforth maintain only model schools, leaving full liberty to all others. Religious training has been reestablished in primary schools, save as parents may request the exemption of their children. The universities have been reduced in number, given greater autonomy, and made economically responsible for their own maintenance. The chief question about the railroads is restoration of discipline and regularity of service. The number of employees will eventually be reduced by some thirty thousand, though up to the present only a few hundred men have been discharged. In the postoffice department, the telephones, part of the telegraphs, and the parcel post, have been ordered returned to private ownership.

Mussolini's attitude toward the General Federation of Labor has created an impression, especially abroad, that he may be inclining toward the Left. This suspicion I regard as quite unfounded. The Federation has dropped in membership from a million and a half to less than three hundred thousand, and is without much political influence. However, the great manufacturers had more confidence in the old Socialist leaders, who blocked the revolution in 1919-20 than in the new Fascist syndicates which tend to be recder than the Socialists. Mussolini's policy toward socialism is therefore more in favor of the Right than of the Left.

The foreign policy of Mussolini can be accurately appraised only by taking into consideration the sentimental background across which Fascism went into power. Mussolini whipped nationalistic emotions to a frenzy in his effort to reach the saddle. In one of his speeches before the October revolution, he talked of destroying the British Empire; in another of repudiating the Treaty of Rapallo. His conduct at present is always more or less influenced by the elements he was courting in such oratory. In spite of a language calculated to conciliate the sense of national pride and to satisfy many fascists, his actual measures are noteworthy rather for their caution and self-restraint. He has been quite deferential toward England, and taken steps toward a rapprochement with France. He has actually evacuated the "third zone" in Dalmatia. He is fighting for time by naming one commission after another for negotiating and protracting negotiations with Yugoslavia. In the Corfu affair, the moment the Conference of Ambassadors showed itself disposed to accept his minimum demands for reparation, he made haste to overlook the maximum. The surprising thing is Mussolini's apparently precise realization of the limits to which he can go, while at the same time he has words aplenty to satisfy the Nationalists who have supported him and placed him in power.

The balance sheet of Fascism during its first year of life shows both assets and liabilities. The assets remain superior to the liabilities as is shown by the facts that the government is still strong and Mussolini still popular. I recently made two journeys where I happened to be on the same train as the Dictator. At every station although it was late at night crowds were waiting for him—all the young men under arms, enthusiasm everywhere.

Among the liabilities I would mention the dissatisfaction of many people directly hit by Fascist reforms (government employees, railroad men, teachers and professors). There is much criticism also because Fascist violence and oppression are still frequent in the small towns, despite the efforts of the government to prevent them. It is generally recognized that Fascism has welcomed and provided for not a few adventurers in its reorganization of public business. These intriguers often quarrel publicly among themselves and what they say of each other suggests that everything is not so clean as it might be under the new regime. There is a general feeling, besides, that while the government is using many eminent abilities, the young men whom it must employ because they created it are not always so competent and efficient as they are rich in good will. Mussolini seems to be infinitely greater as regards ability and political shrewdness than the rest of his party. He seems to lack that nucleus of expert and intelligent supporters which he will need for a long run in office. No government, for that matter, has ever had such supporters in Italy; but what there used to be have been thinned out perceptibly in Mussolini's case; he has appealed especially to the younger, more boisterous, but less studious generation.

However, these difficulties do not seem serious enough to portend any immediate change in the present control of the Italian state. Most well informed observers predict (barring unforeseen events of considerable magnitude) six or seven years of relatively secure life for Fascist rule. Mussolini will not call for new elections till late in 1924 or early in 1925. The new electoral law will guarantee a strong Fascist majority, and the Chamber will not be dissolved again till the expiration of another legal limit—five years. However, Fascism has not been definitely stabilized even yet, though the passage of the electoral law was a long stride in that direction. It still remains a movement, a movement that is still in progress, and has not yet reached the point at which it will rest.

NEW AGREEMENT IS REACHED ON REPARATIONS

(Exclusive China Press)

Paris, Jan. 6.—A provisional agreement was concluded on December 29 between the Rhine-land Water Transport Commission and the Vereinigungs-Braun-Lothar-Bergwerke concerning the transport of lignite for reparations. The transport by water of the reparations lignite to be delivered by the Kohlenyndikat will be carried out under the direction of the allied authorities. Transport will be assured by means of Allied tonnage with the assistance of tugs and barges furnished by the Vereinigungs-Gesellschaft.

New conventions have been concluded between the Franco-Belgian Railway Regie and the Italian railwaying.

Dismissals are beginning again in a number of works where the employers are seizing every opportunity to get rid of workers with a poor output as well as elements of agitation. The majority of the workers have accepted the introduction of the 10-hour day in the factories as from Jan. 2. The employers have decided on closing all establishments to workers who refuse to work ten hours.

Linnett Knocked
Out By Hansen

(I thought to give Toledo a stiff warning. For the Doc it can be said, of course, that he ruled, not only in accordance with a strict interpretation of the rules, but also in accordance with his conscience, and after all is said and done you can't ask more of a referee than that. It was a bit unfortunate that the fight had to end as it did, as both boys were certainly going like a house after (at the time—going so fast, in fact, that Toledo was carried away by excitement. Toledo was duly sorry for the incident, and as to Kyko it was all the same to him—win, lose or draw, on a foul or otherwise, it's all the same to him. Give that good pair of gloves and an opponent and that's all he asks, make the outcome.

TIGORA WINS
In the other prelin Tigora flattened a sailor named Ellis with little difficulty, and in the curtain raiser the hustling Joe Ching scored a win over his old rival, Kid Manila.

These two fights were refereed by Mr. G. R. McCoy, to the complete satisfaction of all present, except, possibly, our young friend Kid Manila, who probably would have liked to see his opponent, Ching, Joe clearly had it on had been given a draw over Ching. Joe clearly had it on him, however.

There was some talk in the Carlton lobby after the battle on how the referee's action in stopping the big fight affected wagers. Some who had placed bets against a knockout of the solver were inclined to think that the referee's action relieved them of obligation to pay; in which they were wrong. In an instance of this kind, in which the referee stops the fight to save from unnecessary punishment a fighter who is all but out, the victory for the winner is recorded as a knockout, and those who wagered that he would win with a knockout are entitled to collect. The referee's action was based solely on a desire to preserve the good name of the game, and has been ruled upon by sporting authorities time and time again as having no effect whatever on the legality of the knockout. Linnett was just as clearly knocked out, as far as wagers were concerned, as he would have been if the referee had counted the fatal ten over him.

LABOR STANDS ALONE, ASSERTS SCOTCH LEADER

Will Not Submit to Dictation By Any Other Party, He Declares

(Reuter's Service)

London, Jan. 5.—Addressing the annual conference of the Scottish Independent Labor Party at Edinburgh today, Mr. William Guthrie, M.P., said that a Labor Government would not tolerate dictation from any other party. It would retain its independence and treat its political program with unimpaired spirit. He emphasized that Labor was the strongest political party in Scotland and therefore, if they had Home Rule in Scotland, the red flag of Socialism would already be flying over the Parliament House.

The conference passed a resolution demanding relief for the distress in the West Highlands, which speakers described as a disaster to a civilized nation, adding that the people refused to live on charity.

A resolution was also passed condemning the Government's failure to deal with unemployment generally, and declaring that the Government's ostracism of Russia had aggravated the unemployment problem.

Another resolution demanded that the Government should refrain from helping the Przech military machine in the Ruhr.

U. S. Stands Firm With Powers On Canton Customs

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Jan. 6.—In reply to questions regarding the alleged commercial statements sent the Canton situation, Reuter learns from the American Legation that Mr. Hughes, the Secretary of State, replying to inquiries in that connection informed the American Legation that the State Department had nothing to do with them and knew nothing of them. The policy of the United States is in no way changed. The State Department considered that solidarity among the Powers with regard to the Canton Customs was essential and the American Government refused to deal with anyone but the Peking Government.

Australia Makes Plea For Tariffs

(Reuter's Service)

London, Jan. 5.—Mr. S. M. Bruce, the Australian Prime Minister, in the course of a speech at Lincoln declared that the Commonwealth meant to develop her manufactures as well as her output of foodstuffs and raw materials. She was not here as a supplicant for trade relations in order to benefit herself to the detriment of Britain. She believed in tariffs and if unable to get a market in Britain, she would have to get one elsewhere. She had already been approached by other countries for reciprocal treatment, but had hitherto refused the offers because they would be detrimental to Great Britain.

Wang Keh-ming Returns To Peking

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Jan. 6.—Mr. Wang Keh-ming returned yesterday from Loyang and attended a meeting of the Cabinet in the afternoon at which he submitted plans for dealing over the new year.

Press reports declare that Mr. Wang's visit to Loyang was most successful, an understanding having been reached whereby there will be no Cabinet change before the new year.

Many Deaths In Cold Wave In U. S.

(Reuter's American Service)

Chicago, Jan. 6.—Over a dozen deaths have resulted from one of the severest cold spells that have swept the country for years. The North Central part of the United States has been the greatest sufferer. The temperatures there were the lowest since 1905. The coldest point was Virginia, Minn., where a temperature of thirty-nine degrees Fahrenheit below zero was recorded.

ANHWEI MAKING PREPARATION FOR WAR IN SPRING

(China Press Correspondence)

Chuchow, Anhwei, Jan. 5.—Whether China goes to war in the spring or not, this province is certainly preparing for such an emergency. The civil governor has been removed from office. Ma Lien-chia, the Tull, has assumed the position of governor in addition to his military position. He left Peking a few days ago to take up the reins of government in Anhwei. One of his first movements was to repudiate all grants of small amounts made by the former governor. These he is said to be gathering for his military uses.

The local provincial middle school, which last summer was demoted from being a provincial normal school, has had to close a full month earlier than usual for lack of funds. The teachers have not yet been paid and the school is in debt to local hongs for rice purchased. It is a question as to whether the school will be opened in the spring.

Tientsin rice merchants, whose agents were here buying rice, gave orders recently to cease buying and to dispose of that they had already bought, even at a little loss. Rumors of Chang Tso-lin and Wu Pei-fu's plans are given as the cause. Rice immediately dropped something like two dollars a picul in price. Local dealers and private individuals are laying in stocks at the lower price. If they have the same success they did in the Revolution, they will make the money on it. At that time they nearly doubled their capital invested.

The local hien magistrate is gathering in funds and repairing the city walls. Broken places are being rebuilt and the wall heightened in places. His method for gathering money is to arrest some country group who have been caught gambling, fine them several hundreds of dollars and go on with his repairs. He could find plenty of victims within the city walls, but they are wise enough to give a "handout" to the police and save their faces.

Lao Yang-jen Still Spreading Terror

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Jan. 5.—Despatches from Hankow report that in the interior districts there is much alarm as to the activities of the bandits especially those of the notorious Lao Yang-jen. When this brigand leader was driven out of Hupoh into Shensi he met other scattered bandit forces who joined him, with the result that he has returned into Hupoh with a greatly increased following, burning and plundering as they go. Tsaoyang was visited by him at the end of the year and despoiled for the second time, the previous visitation having been in August last.

Navigation Difficult On Upper Yangtze Now

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Ichang, Dec. 29.—The low water season brings with it its own difficulties in the navigation of the Upper Yangtze, as some of the steamers have already found. The Yangtze happened to hit a rock and lost a propeller, as well as having her rudder bent. She managed to have the rudder straightened out here, but had to wait till a new propeller came from Shanghai. She has now gone up again, but it is thought that she will only ply between Wansien and Chungking for the remainder of the low water season.

The Kikn was very anxious to make one more trip to Chungking and left here when there was only about four feet of water. She is just a little bit longer than the winter ships and, she found that she had attempted one trip too many. Above Wansien, when trying to turn, she struck a rock and lost rudder and propeller. Fortunately nothing more serious transpired and the captain managed to bring her down here again all right. She has now gone to Shanghai for the winter.

It will be remembered that the N. K. K. S. S. Tehyang Maru was in trouble when the 1st Szechuen Army took Chungking and drove General Yang Sen out. She has lain here ever since with the exception of two or three trips with kerosene to Wansien. But the other day, having heard that General Yang Sen is now master of the upper river, she changed her color in a night and has now left for Chungking. In her disguised condition it is hoped she will be able to get through all right.

There is very little heard of the Japanese boycott now, and the steamers of the N. K. K. are very busy carrying salt from Hankow to Shasi and Ichang. This is the salt that is being sent here in the hope of driving Szechuen salt out of the market. There is going to be a tussle for the trade, but the Szechuenese have themselves to blame, for through soldiers and brigands the demands on the salt junks have been so extortionate they could no longer engage in the trade. It is now learned, however, that the Szechuenese are determined to hold on to this market and so salt is said to be coming down, which they are prepared to sell here at a considerable loss in themselves. Then in the spring the arrangements which were made last summer for the transport of salt by steamer will again be brought into force and it is expected that this will keep the market. But if the Tuchen and others are financially interested in Tientsin salt coming here, it will be very hard for the Szechuenese to hold their end up.

The opium trade continues to flourish. An Ichang branch of the International Anti-Opium Society has been started and the committee wished to arrange for a popular demonstration against the nefarious traffic. Personal visits were made to the schools, asking for co-operation in such an event. But the military got wind of the invitation and sent word to the schools that they should not take part in the procession and no one turned up to make arrangements.

The price per lamp was formerly reported to be $1 per month, but it should have been $6. Even this taxation goes to the military and it is learned from good sources that neither the magistrate nor the local police get a cent of all that is raised from the opium trade.

The China Inland Mission here had a letter from Chungking a few days ago, in which it was mentioned that communication had been received there from Kweichang, the capital of Kweichow, stating that a missionary and his little boy had been taken by bandits in the far-off province. No confirmation, however, has been received of this report.

STRUGGLE OVER SPEAKERSHIP IS UNDIMINISHED

Flight Of Wu Ching-lien Is Held No Evidence Of His Defeat

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Jan. 3.—The struggle in the House of Representatives between the supporters of Speaker Wu Ching-lien and his opponents continues as bitterly as ever. The flight of Mr. Wu to Tientsin does not indicate that he has been effected. It merely means that he has moved his headquarters, as he is continuing in Tientsin an active propaganda against the Government, and his opponents are not in a position to claim any advantage by reason of his departure. Mr. Wu Ching-lien has extended his propaganda to the provinces, and in consequence the Government is apprehensive as to results.

Naturally the Government wishes to avoid taking sides, and this is believed to be the explanation for the issue of the mandate ordering the parliamentary election.

tion to be held in April. It is thought that this course will end the parliamentary struggle. The present Parliament will continue to function till the day prior to the inauguration of the new Parliament, but as many M. P.'s will return to their native provinces to canvass for re-election it is doubtful if Parliament will be able to obtain a quorum henceforth.

TUCHUN HSIAO GOES TO CONFER WITH GEN. WU

(Independent News Service)
Peking, Jan. 3.—Tuchun Hsiao, Governor of Hupeh, went to Hanyang by Wednesday's evening train on purpose to confer with Marshal Wu Pei-fu about the Civil Governorship of Hupeh, and other important affairs relating to Hunan and Szechuan, and expected to return to Wuchang in a few days.

According to information received from a reliable source, Hsiao has been in discussion with General Wu for some time over the question of the Civil Governorship of Hupeh. Hsiao wants to act as Civil Governor concurrently, while General Wu has strongly recommended Ho Pei-yung to the Central Government for the post. Why General Wu has been in favor of Mr. Ho for the Governorship of Hupeh is because of the fact that Mr. Ho has probably helped the former's administration in Szechuan by monetary contributions.

Furthermore, Mr. Ho has won the favor of President Tsao on account of his financial assistance in the last presidential election. Therefore he is in a pretty strong position having secured the support of both General Wu and the Central Government. On the other hand, General Hsiao who has been retained the post of Civil Governor concurrent with the military post, has now found it impossible for him to oppose Mr. Ho. He assumes the post of Governor in a manner not in keeping with his own prestige.

The Central Government in order to issue two mandates, one for the resignation of General Hsiao as Civil Governor of Hupeh, and another for the appointment of Mr. Ho to replace him, with instructions that General Hsiao should act in his stead before his assumption of office.

However, General Hsiao does not agree to this arrangement and contends that the second mandate should only announce the resignation of General Hsiao as Acting Civil Governor. Soon after this, he would resign on his own initiative and request the Central Government to send one man to take up his concurrent duties. This, of course, does not appear to be of much difference to an outsider, but it is so to Tuchun Hsiao, and is the chief reason for his present trip to Hanyang.

Neutral Policy Planned By Peking, Wu Is Told

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Jan. 4.—General Wang Chang-yuan, who accompanied Mr. Wang Keh-ming to Loyang, leaving here on January 1, has returned to Peking. It is expected that Mr. Wang Keh-ming will return to Peking very soon. According to unofficial Chinese reports Mr. Wang sought an interview with Marshal Wu Pei-fu in order to explain the attitude of the Government regarding the various political parties into which the House of Representatives is grouped, particularly the membership in the Constitutional Party of the Ministers of Communications and Justice and the Chief Secretary of the Presidency, about which Marshal Wu recently telegraphed to the President. It is asserted that Mr. Wang gave Marshal Wu an assurance that the Government intended to follow a neutral policy in regard to these groups in future, explaining that the establishment of the Constitutionalists was necessary to prevent the complete domination of the House of Representatives by Mr. Wu Chang-lien. As Mr. Wu had ceased to be a factor in the House there was no longer any need for organized opposition.

These reports add that Mr. Wang also wanted to explain to Marshal Wu the limited resources of the Ministry of Finance and the impossibility of the Government handing over the funds he asks for to meet the expenses of the Szechuan expedition and the operations in Hunan. Finally it is said that Marshal Wu gave a sympathetic hearing to Mr. Wang, with the result that a complete understanding on these matters was reached.

The Boy Emperor Of China

By Thomas Sleep
In New York Tribune

It is hours after midnight on the Summer Palace road, which leads from the Forbidden City out of Peking past the Drum Tower. It is frosty December and the moon is sinking in cold splendor behind the temples.

But Peking's streets are thronged with people—coolies, "mandarins" high and low. A parade is passing, with grotesque lanterns, men in green costumes and gold lined closed gilded sedan chairs swung from poles and carried on the shoulders of coolies, caparisoned horses and camels. The street over which the parade moves is sprinkled with yellow sand, which represents gold dust, and a Chinese brass band is playing "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight." The reason they are playing that air is because it is foreign music and being foreign, although they do not understand it, it must be very fine. Another reason is that it is supposed by them to be an American patriotic air, and the Chinese are partial to anything American. But the reason for the parade, music and all, is that Hsuan Tung, known as the Boy Emperor, is about to be married, the exact time for the ceremony having been fixed at 4 a.m.

I stayed up all night, standing in the road near the Drum Tower, to see that parade as it went out to get the Chinese bride of sixteen years and to fetch her back to be married in the Forbidden City to a man whom she had never seen. They carried her back in a sedan chair, lacquered in gold, but as the chair was closed even the lanterns and torches did not reveal a glimpse of her face to the public. Doubtless her face bore a thick coating of white and pink, as is the custom of Chinese ladies. The fact that the bride had never seen her prospective husband was well known, for that is a Chinese custom, too.

What was most interesting on this occasion was not the marriage—for, being a foreign devil, I didn't see it—but the remarkable attitude of the Chinese people toward a person, a mere slip of a boy, who was until a few years ago and who still might have been their emperor, had they not deposed him. It is inconceivable to the Occidental mind that a people should feel kindly, sentimental, friendly even, toward their ex-emperor and yet not have an iota of desire to replace him on the throne. The Chinese people love this so-called Boy Emperor, as a mother would her child, but any idea of restoring him to power over them is unthinkable to them. They have cast their lot for a republic and they are going to stick to it. Yet the Boy Emperor is their darling. So when he married they made a gala night of it and sent him tons of presents and heartfuls of good wishes. That night all Peking was talking of the Boy Emperor, but not the most ardent revolutionist had the least uneasiness about it.

Hsuan Tung's dynastic name is Puyi. He is eighteen years old. Had he not abdicated in 1921 and thus ended the Manchu dynasty which began in 1644, he would have been the sixteenth "son of heaven" of the line of Ta Ching, as the Manchu emperors called themselves. He would have been the ruler of the most populous nation in the world.

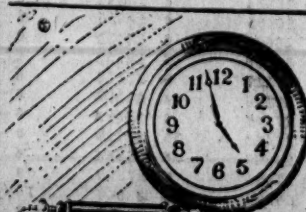

The arrangements for his abdication appear to have been friendly, although they were the climax of a revolution. As a ward of the republic he is permitted to enjoy the luxury of a royal personage shorn of executive power. To enable him to maintain 2,000 servants and retainers he is allowed $2,000,000 a year for household expenses, but because of the bankrupt condition of Peking the stipend never reaches him, and he is a creditor of the republic for more than $20,000,000. His appeals for aid and occasional disposal of some of the imperial household appointments are familiar in Peking.

Every one in Peking learns from tradesmen and others something of the Boy Emperor's life within the walls of the Forbidden City. He has studied English and yearns to travel, but far from traveling, he scarcely ever ventures into the city. That privilege was accorded was on the funeral of his mother. Virtually a prisoner in the Forbidden City he occupies a portion of it set apart for his household alone. It is in itself a miniature city with courtyards, houses and temples, all covered with the tent-shaped roofs of imperial yellow tile. Nearby stands a green porcelain tower, built by Kublai Khan as a constant reminder of past glory.

There the Boy Emperor beguiles the tedious hours, listening to his which he drives over the flagstones British tutor, playing on an American typewriter on which he writes his English lessons, talking on a telephone which is connected only with the departments of his household, or riding an automobile of a courtyard about his palace. Respected, even loved by his countrymen, he is yet a prisoner.

Spot and forward bar silver were each up 1/4 d. in London on Saturday. The New York price was unchanged and the London-New York cross-rate advanced to 430.

At the opening our official quotations here were unchanged from Saturday but as our market became easy during the day with speculators' buyers, our official Sterling rate was subsequently dropped to 3s. 3 1/2 d. The Gold Dollar rate to 70%, the Yen rate raised to 65 and the other rates changed accordingly.

In the early part of the Morning some business in Sterling was done at 3s. 3 1/4 d. for near delivery, 3s. 3 1/2 d. January 3s. 3d. February and 3s. 2 3/4 d. March. Gold Dollars were done at 71 1/4 for near delivery, 70 1/2 for January, 70 1/4 February and 70 March.

However there were strong buyers at these rates and the market quickly eased off until at the close when there were no sellers of Sterling at better than 3s. 3 1/4 d. for near delivery, 3s. 3 1/2 d. January, 3s. 2 3/4 d. February and 3s. 2 1/2 d. March.

The best sellers of Gold Dollars at the same time were offering 70 1/2 for near delivery, 70 1/4 January, 69 1/2 February and 69 1/4 March. There were sellers of Yen at the close at 63 1/2 for January, 63 1/2 February and 64 March.

Banks were quoting 3s. 4 1/4 d., 72 1/2 and 1470 for Sterling, Gold Dollar and Franc Bills for near delivery. For February there were buyers at 3s. 3 1/4 d., 71 1/2 and 1465 and for forward deliveries buyers at 3s. 3 1/2 d., 71 1/2 and 1460.

India bought silver in London on Saturday and the market is reported as closing steady. New York also report their market as steady.

Northerners Take Five More Cities

(Independent News Service)
Hankow, Jan. 3.—According to an official telegram to Wu-chang from General Yuan Tsum-min, commander of the Kweichow troops, five more cities have fallen into the hands of Northerners after fierce fighting, and they are Linghsuen, Tszkiang, Changsha, Pelling, and Kiangtsein. The Szechuanese have been hotly pursued and have now retreated to Yungchang. Telegrams have been sent to General Wang Yuching who is the chief commander of the campaign to despatch more troops to the front in order to start the well arranged attack on Chengtu.

FORMAMINT
THE GERM KILLING THROAT TABLET

If you Suffer from
"Smoker's Throat"

—or other painful irritations of the oral cavity you should at once use FORMAMINT.

"In both acute and chronic pharyngitis, induced by abuse of tobacco, Formamint Tablets have proved particularly efficacious in the hands of the medical profession," writes the Medical Press.

Sucking these palatable, harmless tablets promotes an abundant flow of saliva, which itself is rendered germicidal. Thus the whole mouth and throat are slowly saturated with a soothing, healing antiseptic fluid, which penetrates everywhere.

With the destruction of the causative bacteria, swelling and inflammation subside, and Nature does the rest—without the fuss and trouble of old-fashioned methods like gargling or painting the throat with caustic and nauseating chemicals.

WRITE TO-DAY FOR FULL PARTICULARS

WULFING'S

FORMAMINT

The Germ-Killing Throat Tablet

Just as effectively—and by the same process—as Formamint safeguard you against dangerous infections which start in the mouth and throat—Influenza, for example, Diphtheria, Scarlet Fever, Measles, Mumps, and the dreaded Pyorrhoia.

Another Martyr In China

It is a regrettable fact that no great interval of time can elapse in China without some report coming to hand of foreigners being held up by bandits, taken prisoner and subjected to all manner of indignity. Nor does it always stop there; for the list of murdered foreigners seems ever to be increasing in length with a steady persistency. We doubt, however, if a more callous murder has been perpetrated than that of Father Soren at Hokiao. There appears from Reuter's message no suggestion that this martyr did anything calculated to arouse the resentment of those who brought about his death. There was nothing personal in the deed, and apparently no motive whatever except a desire to embarrass General Ma Chi. The murderers seem to have killed this unfortunate servant of religion as a sort of political demonstration. Why foreigners should be selected for the purpose is apparent enough. A Chinese life seems as worthless for political purposes as a foreigner's is valuable and unless drastic steps are taken these occurrences are likely to become more and more frequent.

The failure of the Powers to take adequate steps to procure retribution for the seizure of their nationals at Linching last year has done as much to cheapen the regard in which foreigners are held in China as anything which happened in the Great War and which is so often looked upon as contributing so extensively to the loss of foreign prestige. And since that event there has been a number of cases where that protection which should surround the foreign resident in China has proved absolutely valueless. The fact that Peking may or may not be forced to pay inadequate compensation for the indignities inflicted on foreigners, has no deterrent effect upon those in various localities to whom Peking is but a name without authority and there can be little doubt but that residence in the interior of those whose whole lives are being spent in the service of these people is becoming more and more dangerous with each recurrence of such distasteful murders as the one news of which came to hand over the week-end. If our own governments cannot protect us, who can? And yet it is clear from a number of such cases in the recent past that sufficient force has not been brought to bear on what passes for a government to make it set its own house in order and prevent these attacks on the sanctity of the life of the foreigner within its borders. We can but express the hope that the French Government will adopt a stronger line in this matter than has marked foreign policies in China up to the present. It might help to stiffen the backbones of the other powers whose manner of dealing with such crimes has been supine in the extreme.

And now, since the above was penned, news is to hand of still another shocking and tragic outrage. A British-Chinese owned merchant ship plying up river has been boarded and pirated above Ichang, Captain Brandt, her British skipper, has been murdered along with his comrade, and their bodies cast overboard into the river. The Dollar Line here is agent for the vessel. Thus within forty-eight hours we have news of further outrages on foreigners involving French, British and American interests. Perhaps now the Powers will realise how desperate the problem of the safety of their nationals in China has become and will take the steps necessary for their protection.

Unity By Force

THOSE who doubt Wu Pei-fu's ability to unify China by force of arms will get considerable joy out of the latest despatches from the Upper Yangtze; telling of new acts of wholesale brigandage and piracy all the way from Ichang to Chungking and of the apparent demoralisation of Yang Sen's offensive. Even discounting the propaganda element in the reports and accepting the recapture of Chungking by the northern forces, it would take an optimist to build any hopes on the situation.

Since Yang Sen began his attempt to seize Szechuen last winter on behalf of the northern leader, there has been some cause for hope of immediate peace and improved commercial conditions along the Upper River. Phases of the campaign have been very successful and Yang Sen has twice been within striking distance of Chengtu, the provincial capital. Wu Pei-fu has lavished attention, men and funds on the campaign there as he has done in no other section with the evident intent of forcing peace at any price. From the commercial point of view, the promise of developing the natural resources of Szechuen together with Yang Sen's open encouragement to shipping and trading interests has been encouraging.

But the futility of all this is now evident. Yang Sen does not command the confidence of the Szechuenese and is not strong enough forcibly to make them submit to his administration. He has not even been able to obtain loyalty from his own commanders who again and again have mutinied and cut off his communications or organised his forces. In view of the last eighteen months of continuing promises and continuing disappointments, Wu Pei-fu's present assurances (that the campaign will succeed) are anything but convincing.

Business on the Upper River is reported to be at its worst condition in years. Brigandage on land and attacks upon shipping along the river, even within Yang Sen's lines, are so numerous that trade has shrunk to a mere skeleton and a number of the steamers which hoped this winter to profit by the new low-water traffic arrangement are tied up for lack of cargo. Customs receipts at one of the ports are said to have dropped off over 70 per cent from the figures of last year at this time. Exorbitant tax levied on all cargo, particularly on hides and wool oil have almost completely shut off exports and imports are equally discouraged.

For business there is no escape from this aggravating situation. As long as China is saddled with millions of uniformed brigands under arms trade will have to pay prohibitive tolls and suffer continuing impossible interferences.

That the public derives from this warfare nothing but grief is equally evident. On the Upper River where there were originally two armies there are now a score of them under as many ambitious chieftains. Force is proving a bad example and instead of bringing about unity is only accelerating disunity and anarchy and national suicide.

Whether provincial autonomy is the way out or whatever new scheme recommends itself for establishing peace in China, it is becoming daily more obvious that the program of unification by bullets is without promise.

A Strong Hint To Britain

WHILE the recent British elections appear to have not only put the lid on the coffin of Tariff Reform, but to have decently interred the remains as well, it is interesting to know how other portions of the Empire regard this fiscal policy which was designed for the further binding together of the most loosely knit empire in the world's history. The recent speech of the Australian Prime Minister seems to be about as straight a talking to as the British have received for some time past.

Australia which has suffered more than considerably at the hands of the Labor party has all along been strongly in favor of the establishment of an imperial scheme whereby the United Kingdom and the Colonies would provide mutually acceptable markets in circumstances calculated to place alien traders at a disadvantage. It was only to be expected that an Empire which within its borders can supply most if not all of its needs should work towards such an end, but the party most likely to benefit thereby has turned the whole scheme down with a most emphatic gesture. The result will not be difficult to foresee unless some means are speedily effected for producing an alteration in the policy to which Britain seems irrevocably committed.

The day has passed when the United Kingdom could retain the loyalty of her colonies, by force of arms, or even sentiment, though this last has proved itself remarkably strong. The colonies are demanding some signs of affection from the motherland other than the pious expressions of her politicians some other link than that of fond memory, and it is to be found in economic benefits which can be mutually conferred.

Neither Australia, nor Canada, nor South Africa have to be supplicants for trade relations with the British on terms calculated to be detrimental to the home country and it was quite time that the Australian Premier told the British so. Australia believes in tariffs as a means of obtaining and conferring benefits wholly without the power of and free trade country to give or receive. That other countries believe the same is evidenced by their approaching the southern continent with proposals for reciprocal treatment. Australia can find other countries in the world with which to bargain, and cannot logically refrain from doing so, if the country to which she owes some duty of sentiment fails to place herself in a position to negotiate in matters of business where friendship need not necessarily be the best inducement to the expansion of trade.

It may be some time yet, before it comes true, but we see in the failure to establish some solid motive for the continuance of unity within the Empire, one of the most serious factors which threatens it. In this age when men and governments look for results, it is useless to endeavor to explain away their non-production, and if Australia grows tired of waiting for the British to make a move, it will not be particularly blameworthy if its government goes elsewhere in search of that consideration it fails to obtain from the party which ordinarily should be the most ready to accord it.

EXCERPTS FROM GREAT THINKERS

By Mathy

OUR WORST ENEMY IS FEAR

Thought's most deadly instrument for marring human lives is fear. Fear demoralises character, destroys ambition, induces or causes disease, paralyses happiness in self and others, and prevents achievement. It has not one redeeming quality. It is all evil. Physiologists now well know that it impoverishes the blood by demoralising assimilation and cutting off nutrition. It lowers mental and physical vitality, deadens every element of success. It is fatal to the happiness of youth, and is the most terrible accompaniment of old age. Buoyancy flees before its terrifying glance, and cheerfulness cannot dwell in the same house with it.

"The most extensive of all the morbid mental conditions which reflect themselves so disastrously on the human system is the state of fear," says Dr. William H. Holmes. "It has many degrees or gradations, from the state of extreme alarm, fright, or terror, down to the slightest shade of apprehension of impending evil. But all along the line it is the same thing—a paralyzing impression upon the centers of life which can produce, through the agency of the nervous system, a vast variety of morbid symptoms in every tissue of the body."

"Fear is like carbonic-acid gas pumped into one's atmosphere," says Hester Fletcher. "It causes mental, moral, and spiritual asphyxiation, and sometimes death—death to energy, death to tissue, and death to all growth."

Yet from our birth we live in the presence and under the dominion of this demon, fear. The child is cautioned a thousand times a year to look out for this, and to look out for that; it may get poisoned, it may get bitten, it may get killed; something terrible may happen to it if it does not do as told. Men and women cannot bear the sight of some harmless animal or insect because, as children, they were told it would hurt them. One of the cruellest things imaginable is to impress into a child's plastic mind the terrible image of fear, which, like the letters cut upon a sapling, grows wider and deeper with age. The baleful shadows of such blasting and blighting pictures will hang over the whole life and shut out the bright sun of joy and happiness.

An Australian writer says:

"One of the worst misfortunes which can possibly happen to a growing child is to have a mother who is perpetually tormented by nervous fears. If a mother gives way to fears—morbid, minute, and all-prevailing—she will inevitably make the environment of her children one of increasing dread and timidity. The background of fear is the habit or instinct of anticipating the worst. The mother who never makes a move, or allows her children to make a move, without conjuring up a myriad of malign possibilities, imbitters the cup of life with a slow-acting poison."

"I know that thousands of boys and girls are today tremulous, weak, passive, unalert on the physical side, simply because they were taught in the kindergarten stage, or earlier, to see the potency of danger in all they did or tried to do. A mother assumes a terrible responsibility when from a child's fears of possible injury she forbids a child such physical abandon as will promote courage, endurance, self-reliance, and self-control."

"For more than twenty years I have made a study of criminal psychology and of infantile psychology," says Dr. Lino Ferriani. "Thousands of times I have been compelled to recognize the sad fact that at least eighty-eight per cent of morbidly timid children could have been cured and saved in time by means of common-sense principles of psychology and physiological hygiene, in which the main factor is suggestion inspired by wholesome courage."

Not content with instilling fear of possibly real things, many mothers and most nurses invent all sorts of bugbears and bogies to frighten poor babies into obedience. They even attempt to induce sleep by telling children, "If you don't go right to sleep, a great big bear will come and eat you up!" How much sleep would a grown man get in a situation where this was a real possibility? Fear of the dark would seldom cost if parents carefully showed children that nothing is different in the dark from what it is in the light. Instead of so doing, they take pains to people the mysterious dark with every sort of ogre and monster that human imagination has been able to conjure up. Some one has well expressed in verse this cruel but too common sin against healthy-minded childhood:

"He who checks a child with terror,
Stops its play and stills its song,
Not alone commits an error,
But a grievous moral wrong."

More Truth Than Poetry

"I've been around a bit," he said.
"I've traveled east, I've traveled west.
But I have never lost my head,
Nor failed to search for what was best."

I've tried my hand at many things,
I've dreamed of wealth, and sought renown,
I've had my share of lively flings,
And now I'd like to settle down."

Whose charms were not to be denied,
And once a widow who was fair
Was willing to become my bride;
She had an income that was nice,
And I was tempted, I may say,
But in the end I found the price
Much higher than I cared to pay."

"I've been around, and I have seen
All that a man can wish to see;
I'm very far from being green,
And now the quiet life for me;
If you will say the word I'll cease
To care to roam from town to town;
In fact, I've learned to long for peace,
And willingly I'd settle down."

"I thank you kindly, sir," she said.
"For giving me your confidence;
I'm glad you haven't lost your head,
In keeping it you've shown good sense;
I've also had some little flings,
It's woman's privilege today—
He rushed to get his hat and things,
And said good night, and went away."

Hall's Distemper has led the way to a new era in house decoration—the era of brighter, cleaner and healthier homes.

It is the most durable of all decorations, lasting for years with freshness unimpaired, whereas wall-papers deteriorate from the first day by fading and accumulating dust and dirt.

Hall's Distemper is a thorough disinfectant, and is applied directly upon the wall, forming a hard surface, from which dust and dirt may be "spring-cleaned" by lightly sponging with warm water.

Famous Love Letters

HORACE WALPOLE—1717-1797
In the letters which this great Englishman has left behind him, may be traced every political, literary, every fashionable social and almost every social event of his time. Walpole's pen, it is said, was ever in his hand and he poured his labors usually to the matters that love, though some of the letters which women sent to him have made history. Madame du Deffand, one of the letters of the later court days of France, was an extravagant admirer of Walpole's and her communications to him (many of which have been published) breathe affection that is far from ordinary. It was to his friends and Mary Berry, that the writer appeared to have given his deepest devotion. He was reported to have said at one time that he was not sure which sister he loved the most, though history has it that he asked Mary to become his wife. On his death he left the handsome property adjoining his estate on the River Thames to the Misses Berry. He rarely used his title, Earl of Orford, but frequently signed himself "The Uncle of the Late Earl of Orford" after his nephew, the third Earl of Orford, died.

HORACE WALPOLE TO THE MISSSES BERRY
I am sorry—in the sense of the word before it meant, like a He-brow word, glad or sorry—that I am engaged this evening; and I am at your command on Tuesday, as it is always my inclination to be.

It is a misfortune that words become so much the current coin of society, that like King William's shillings, they have no impression left; they are worn so smooth that they mark no more to whom they first belonged than to whom they do belong and are not worth even the twelvemonth into which they may be changed. But if they mean too little, they may seem to mean too much, too; especially when an old man (who is often synonymous for a miser) parts with them. I am afraid of protesting how much I delight in your society lest I should seem to affect being gallant; but if two negatives make an affirmative why may not two ridiculous compose one piece of sense? And therefore, as I am in love with you both, I trust it is a proof of the good sense of your devoted,

H. Walpole.

HORACE WALPOLE TO THE MISSSES BERRY

My Dearest Angel—I had two persons talking law to me and was forced to give an immediate answer, so that I could not read your note till I had done; and now I do read it and it breaks my heart! If my pure affection has brought grief and mortification on you I shall be the most miserable of men. My nephew's death has brought a load upon me that I have not strength to bear, as I told General Conway this morning. . . . You know I scarce wish to live, but to carry you to Cliveden! But I talk of myself when I should speak of your mind. Is all your felicity to be in the power of a newspaper? Who is not so? Are your virtue and purity, and my innocence about you—are our conscience no shield against anonymous folly or envy? Would you only condescend to be my friend if I were a beggar? For your sake, for poor mine, combat such extravagant delicacy and do not poison the few last days of life, which you, and you only, can sweeten. I am too exhausted to write more, but let your heart and your strong understanding remove such chimeras. How could you say you wish you had not returned? (To Miss Mary Berry)

What's The Use?

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

If that's the way you feel about it, there is really no use at all. For you can hardly be argued into caring about life—if you don't. On the other hand—but we'll see about that hand later.

Though most of us are glad enough to be alive—at any rate, in no hurry to leave life—it is appalling how many are willing to hasten their departure.

You are not going to be fed with sad, astounding suicide statistics which show rapid growth of the fashion of self-destruction.

The question is: Why do they do it? Probably you have your own answer.

The psychological mystery increases when a seemingly successful and an abundantly honored person does away with himself.

As in the recent case of Professor Arthur Gordon Webster, of Clark University, in Worcester, Mass.

Dr. Webster left a note to his son, saying: "This is the only way. For years I have been a failure. My research work is worth nothing. Everybody else knows it. Now I do."

Indeed, nobody else appears to have thought so. A life-long researcher and experimenter, Dr. Webster was highly respected and appreciated.

He felt that he had failed as a physicist. Yet he had received prizes and several honorary degrees for his work in physics.

He was an honored member of the leading scientific societies of America, Great Britain, Germany, France and Italy.

He was a successful inventor and musician. He was authority on art, having written the Sir Joshua Reynolds discourses probably. Johnson was an enormous reader and he read chiefly for purposes of conversing wisely and well. Yet he was no prig. He left a record of conversation that shows his vast learning and his wit; but he said: "They call me a scholar; yet how very little literature there is in my conversation."

He knew, all trades very well and talked about them intelligently and most interestingly—brewing (which he might well have learned from the Thrales), threshing, hatching, ditching, tanning, gunpowder, etc.

Take for example, Friday, May 7, 1773, Johnson being then sixty-four years old. The record is of only a part of what Johnson said, but even that falls on many things. This was the day that he spoke rather bluntly of Lady Di Beauclerk; on the exuberant talk of old Mr. Langdon on the possibility of having talk with the Esquimaux by means of signs; on Hawkesworth's compilation of voyages; on etymology; on the migration of birds; on the advantages of civilized life; on the differences between instinct and reason; on toleration; on suicide; on the invocation of the saints and, of course, on the eternal question of Ireland. Boswell concludes that Dr. Johnson's variety and extent of knowledge are "surprising."

More ability to talk well is not sufficient; indeed, this is a menace if not controlled. The essential requisite is sympathy. One must have a quick and responding sense of joy and pain in and a foremost authority on sound and auditory science.

His invention of a device to find the direction of fog signals, did much to minimize the awful sea menace of collisions.

He was ranked so high as a practical scientist that he was appointed, during the war, as a member of the Naval Advisory Board.

The story of this man could be continued at great length, giving you a record of rare success, but—Evidently all this left Dr. Webster unsatisfied. He committed suicide because of his sense of utter and abject futility.

It was his highbrow equivalent of "What's the Use?"

Two years ago he ran as an independent candidate for Congress, declaring:

"The only platform upon which I wish to run was written nearly two thousand years ago by Jesus Christ: 'Not to be ministered unto, but minister.'"

If, within himself, Dr. Webster could have lived up to that ideal, he would not have felt his life a failure.

The greatest, the humblest, can do no more and nothing better than to serve.

What we must look for is not reward or wage or appreciation. But we must find self-approval and the satisfaction of feeling that, somehow, what we do is worth while to the world.

What's the use? Every use, if you can say to yourself: "I'm doing my darndest. Other angels can do no more."

On Conversation

By Arthur G. Staples

It is said that Leonard Woods, who has a considerable place in early New England annals, and who was president of Bowdoin College in Maine just prior to the Civil War, was the most accomplished talker of his generation. He commanded any gathering that he attended and talked it into a state of profound admiration and enthusiasm. He was like the Vicar in Præd's poem:

"His talk was like a stream that runs With rapid change from rocks to roses; It slipped from politics to puns, It passed from Mahomet to Moses.

Beginning with the laws which keep The planets in their radiant courses, And ending in some precept deep, For dressing eels or shoeing horses."

It is, however, of record that Woods was Johnsonian in diction, ponderous in trisyllables and sonorous of voice. He had no simple words in his vocabulary. Perhaps Johnson and Burks are better illustrations of that lost art of general conversation which was once cultivated to the extent that the geniuses of its cult were ashamed if they were uninformed and inept on any subject.

It is said that Burke could talk on any subject except gaming and music. He was authority on art, having written the Sir Joshua Reynolds discourses probably. Johnson was an enormous reader and he read chiefly for purposes of conversing wisely and well. Yet he was no prig. He left a record of conversation that shows his vast learning and his wit; but he said: "They call me a scholar; yet how very little literature there is in my conversation."

He knew, all trades very well and talked about them intelligently and most interestingly—brewing (which he might well have learned from the Thrales), threshing, hatching, ditching, tanning, gunpowder, etc.

Take for example, Friday, May 7, 1773, Johnson being then sixty-four years old. The record is of only a part of what Johnson said, but even that falls on many things. This was the day that he spoke rather bluntly of Lady Di Beauclerk; on the exuberant talk of old Mr. Langdon on the possibility of having talk with the Esquimaux by means of signs; on Hawkesworth's compilation of voyages; on etymology; on the migration of birds; on the advantages of civilized life; on the differences between instinct and reason; on toleration; on suicide; on the invocation of the saints and, of course, on the eternal question of Ireland. Boswell concludes that Dr. Johnson's variety and extent of knowledge are "surprising."

More ability to talk well is not sufficient; indeed, this is a menace if not controlled. The essential requisite is sympathy. One must have a quick and responding sense of joy and pain in the feelings of others. A sort of intuitive understanding must go with the art. Women are more sympathetic than men; hence it is more of a delight to talk with a brilliant woman than with a brilliant man.

Self-effacement is a part of the art which many can never learn. Too many clever people are not willing to make the sacrifice.

They talk on and on, and become bores. Conversation is a give and take. There are few like the Beloved Vagabond who talked for his dinner. Clever people lead up to their best things.

Diogenes led up to his bitter things and Sheridan led up to his "smart" things. Few are willing, like Montaigne, to put their company on their best subjects and give them a chance, each to talk. A dinner where there were two naval officers, admirals, is recalled, in which the subject of talk was society and scandals of the navy for forty years. Interesting enough; but what part could a landsman take in it. And one does like to edge a word in occasionally.

"The honorableness part of talk is to give the occasion," says Bacon. Macaulay gave nobody else a chance; he talked all the time, brilliantly enough. Sidney Smith spoke well of Macaulay's talk. "Tom's talk affords occasionally splendid flashes of silence," said the witty clergyman. There is the story of two famous talkers who were pitted against each other. One held the floor and was talking, and the other lay in wait for a pause—literally straining at the leash. Said the canny Scot who looked on: "Mon but he's a talker, of a sort; but if he spits he's done."

This was John Stuart Mill's favorite story. Monologues are very jealous of each other, as a rule.

We spoil conversation sometimes not by lack of mere tact so much as by lack of tolerance. We cannot brook argument, much less refutation. For this reason religion and politics are often impossible; whereas they should be the most fertile subjects of wise and sane conversation.

In my country the periods of political campaigns are always periods of fights between estimable citizens. But Emerson tells of a company in which they talked life, love, marriage, politics, sex, hatred, suicide, magic, theism, art, poetry, myself, myself, all with a security and vivacity which belonged to the nobility of the company and their brave truth. THAT must have been some fine party.

Imagination belongs in conversation, and a little gracious lying is not to be deprecated. Many fine folk have bemoaned the decay of the art of lying prettily. It is an outrage to ask if a story be true or not. Love it for the wit and the art of the fiction, if such it be. You may not sit by the fireside with the Ten Commandments written on the face and expect to be amused.

Unpersuaded

BY DR. CHARLES FLEISCHER

There's a revival hymn that sings and rings the changes on the theme "Almost Persuaded."

That song must have had its origin in the good, old pre-war days, when Christendom fondly imagined itself to be Christian.

Naturally, then, those already persuaded would hover with yearning expectant interest over the penitent sinner who was "almost persuaded."

All that is changed now, when the whole Western world is so sadly aware of shortcoming and is wondering whether, indeed, it ever was Christian.

It looks as though the conversion of Christendom to Christianity would have to be won all over again.

Here for instance, Earl Birkenhead has been frankly saying that there have been hundreds

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is particularly a preparation for infants and Children made agreeable to the taste, acceptable to the stomach and pleasant in its action. It has been in use for over thirty years and has always been one of the most highly esteemed of all cathartic preparations. It has one great advantage over other preparations of its kind in that while it opens the organs readily and completely, it does not have a tendency to produce subsequent constipation so much to be dreaded. It was only after years of research in the fields of herbs and roots for a combination of purely vegetable matter that would have all the virtues of Castor Oil, without its disagreeable, nauseating properties, especially when used for infants or children, that the formula used in Fletcher's Castoria was found, and which for over 30 years has proven its worth. Try it.

Save the Babies

Infant mortality is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one quarter die before they reach one year, thirty seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one half before they are fifteen! We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save many of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestion, sickness, death. To avoid any possibility of giving your child opiates, or narcotics of any kind keep Fletcher's Castoria in the house, and Save the Babies.
